Once upon a time . . . there was a little boy in India named Sambo who was overjoyed with the new outfit his mother and father had given him. One day as he was walking through the jungle he met a great big tiger who told Sambo he would eat him up if he didn't give him his pretty red coat. Sambo gave the tiger his coat and went on through the jungle where he met three more tigers. He had to give the first his beautiful green umbrella, the second his blue pants, and the third tiger demanded his pretty purple shoes. Poor little Sambo started for home and he was very sad because the cruel tigers had taken away all of his fine clothes. But on the way home he heard a strange noise, and when he peeked through the tall jungle grass he saw the tigers chasing each other around a tree. They were growling and fighting over Sambo's pretty new clothes. Little Sambo went up to the tigers and told them that if they stopped fighting and gave his pretty clothes back he would treat them to a plate of the finest, lightest pancakes they ever ate. So they gave back his beautiful red coat, his green umbrella, his blue pants and his pretty purple shoes. Then they all went to a Sambo's Restaurant where each tiger ate seventy-five pancakes . . . but Sambo ate a hundred and sixty-nine because he was so-o-o-o-o-o-o hungry.
